

EXPLORE

the community created for counselors

As a counselor, you help people every day with personal, social, educational and career concerns. You help them to make decisions, solve problems, and adjust to change. You became a counselor because you care about others. Your work is important to so many in your community. You're focused on them, but who's looking out for you?

That's where the American Counseling Association comes in — a membership association created just for you, the professional counselor.

ACA is the world's largest organization for professional counselors and has been there to advocate for you and the profession since 1952 — then, today and tomorrow. Representing and serving counselors is our main mission.

You can show you care about the profession AND your clients by joining your fellow professionals in ACA. Your membership gives you the resources to increase your knowledge, advocate for the profession and advance your career at the same time.

Join now at counseling.org or call 800-347-6647 x222!