Dedication

To all our graduate students and colleagues worldwide who have supported and encouraged the development and writing of this book
Table of Contents

Preface xi
Acknowledgments xiii
About the Authors xv
About the Contributors xvi

PART ONE
Career Counseling in the 21st Century:
Evolving Contexts, Challenges, and Concepts

CHAPTER 1
Career Counseling: A Life Career Development Perspective 3

CHAPTER 2
Ways of Understanding Career Behavior and Development:
Selected Theories and Approaches 19

CHAPTER 3
Empowering Life Choices: Career Counseling
in the Contexts of Race and Class 49
Lisa Y. Flores

CHAPTER 4
Empowering Women’s Life Choices:
An Examination of Gender and Sexual Orientation 75

CHAPTER 5
Empowering Men’s Life Choices:
An Examination of Gender and Sexual Orientation 101
With P. Paul Heppner
PART THREE
Client Goal or Problem Resolution

CHAPTER 16

Using Information, Taking Action, and Developing Plans of Action 267

CHAPTER 17

Bringing Closure to Career Counseling 287

Index 297
Preface

The United States, the third most populous country globally, accounts for about 4.6% of the world’s population. Within the next few years, the U.S. population—currently estimated at 299 million persons—is expected to reach twice its 1950 level of 152 million. More than just being double in size, the population has become qualitatively different from what it was in 1950.

As noted by the Population Reference Bureau, “The U.S. is getting bigger, older, and more diverse.” —Shrestha, 2006, p. 1

Vast and far-reaching changes are taking place in the nature and structure of the social and economic systems in which people live and the industrial and occupational structures in which they work (Friedman, 2007; U.S. Department of Labor, 2008). The values and beliefs individuals hold about themselves, about others, and about the world are changing. More and more people are seeking meaning and coherence in their lives. Our society also is becoming multiracial, multilingual, and multicultural. Women are entering the labor force in record numbers, and men are questioning traditionally held beliefs about their roles.

Far from being a standard or rote procedure, career counseling, in response to these social and economic changes, has become a dynamic, creative, and highly individualized process. The continually emerging and evolving ideas about the nature and structure of individuals’ career development are providing practitioners with new ways to understand and work with clients of all ages and circumstances. To keep abreast of these changes you may wish to update your knowledge about the ever-changing contexts and conditions in which people will live and work in the 21st century. You may wish to revisit and revitalize how you conceptualize the career development of individuals and the structure of the career counseling you do with clients. You may be looking for specific interventions, including qualitative and quantitative assessments, to help you and your clients gather information about their goals and problems, work together to understand and interpret this information, and choose interventions to assist them in reaching their goals or resolving their problems.

Purpose of the Book

The purpose of this book is to help you expand and extend your understanding of individuals’ career development as well as your vision of career counseling and the skills and techniques in your career counseling repertoire. Specifically, this book is designed to help you update and add to the knowledge and skills you already have. It will help you better understand and interpret client information gathered and behavior observed during career counseling by using concepts from traditional and new and emerging postmodern conceptualizations of career development. It also will help you better understand and interpret client information and behavior in terms of life career themes, or the ideas, beliefs, attitudes, and values clients hold about themselves, others, and the world in which they live. Finally, it will help you assist clients of all ages and circumstances to more effectively understand and use such information and behavior in their quest to achieve their career goals or resolve their career concerns.

This book incorporates the strongest parts of the traditional understanding of the career counseling process with the ever-changing social and economic demands of the 21st century. In addition, it incorporates new and emerging postmodern career development concepts into career counseling practices, further strengthening your understanding of the career counseling process. This is important, because we believe that the process of career counseling has long been overlooked, as if this particular brand of counseling were devoid of process. We propose a process for career counseling, and we focus particular attention on how this process can be helpful in expanding options and empowering the authentic life choices of women; men; racial and ethnic minorities; gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender clients; and individuals with disabilities. Although we are keenly aware that these categories do not cover all forms of diversity in human life, we choose to highlight them and hope that much of what we express is transferable to the issues of other diverse groups as well.

To help you gain these specific skills, this book brings together selected concepts and techniques from the disciplines of counseling, psychology, sociology, and economics in general, and the discipline of career psychology specifically. It is a book for you if you are looking to enhance your theoretical knowledge and expand your practice skills through an in-depth examination of specifically selected career counseling interventions, including various qualitative and quantitative assessments. It is a book for you if you are looking to update and expand your ability to gain insights into client behavior, to develop hypotheses about such behavior, and to apply this knowledge in the selection of effective career counseling techniques and assessments.

Overview of the Contents

This book presents a theory-based, practice-focused approach to career counseling. It presents career counseling holistically using life career development as a way to view and understand overall human development in general and career development specifically. It is a strengths-based, theoretically sound conception of career counseling that is practitioner friendly and very usable with clients of all ages and circumstances. Specific attention is given to the critical life contexts in which career development unfolds and career counseling takes place, including gender, culture/race, sexual orientation, social class, spirituality, and disability. Specific attention is also given to the ever-changing work world, including the implications of globalization and the interactions of work and family.

Because the book is theory based and practice oriented, there is an emphasis on the nature and structure of the working alliance as central to the career counseling process. A strength of the book is the use of the postmodern theories of constructivism and social constructionism focusing on narratives to identify life career themes used by clients to organize their thoughts, feelings, and ideas. To assist career counselors in gathering client information, understanding and hypothesizing client behavior, and helping clients develop and carry out action plans, the book includes very practical and highly usable presentations of a number of qualitative career assessments along with several quantitative instruments. A unique emphasis in the book focuses on dealing with resistant clients, why and how these clients may resist, and how to work with such resistance. Finally, the book describes how to use information in career counseling, how to help clients develop and use actions plans, and how to bring closure to the career counseling process.

Part I, “Career Counseling in the 21st Century: Evolving Contexts, Challenges, and Concepts,” provides you with foundation knowledge and perspectives concerning our changing world in the 21st century. Chapter 1 focuses on the career counseling process and the phases that are involved in working with clients. It describes the career counseling process from a life career development perspective and presents information about the Career Counseling Self-Efficacy Scale. Chapter 2 describes the evolution of career development theory building and presents selected traditional and postmodern theories and approaches to understanding career development, with an emphasis on the use of theoretical constructs in the practice of career counseling.
Chapters 3, 4, and 5 highlight the implications of increasing diversity, focus on the impact of social class, describe women’s and men’s issues as they affect career counseling, and discuss sexual orientation issues and concerns. Finally, Chapter 6 focuses on empowering the life choices of people with disabilities, whereas Chapter 7 examines the changes that are occurring in the worlds of work and family and the impact these changes have on the lives of individuals.

Part II, “Client Goal or Problem Identification, Clarification, and Specification,” provides in-depth discussions of issues and selected techniques and instruments, all tied to the first phases of the career counseling process detailed in Chapter 1. Chapter 8 examines the opening phase of career counseling, focusing on the working alliance and its importance in the career counseling process. Chapter 9 describes the concept of life career themes, shows how life career themes are identified and described by using example career themes, and details how these life career themes assist in understanding client goals, behavior, or concerns. Chapters 10, 11, and 12 feature postmodern qualitative techniques—a structured interview, the genogram, an occupational card sort—that provide structure and stimuli to help clients tell their stories and identify their life career themes during the information-gathering phase of career counseling.
Then Chapter 13 presents an in-depth discussion of how selected standardized tests and inventories provide information about clients’ interests and personalities. Chapter 14 presents assessments that focus on clients’ styles and strengths. Finally, Chapter 15 deals with resistant clients, the kinds of resistance they may exhibit, and ways to respond to clients who resist.

Part III, “Client Goal or Problem Resolution,” emphasizes career counseling strategies to use to assist clients in reaching their goals or resolving their concerns.
Chapter 16 pays attention to the use of information in the career counseling process and presents the details of how clients can set goals and develop career plans based on the outcomes clients and counselors have arrived at through their work in career counseling. Chapter 17 examines closure in career counseling. The topic of how to bring closure to the career counseling process and the issues that are involved in closing the working alliance between client and counselor are featured.

Who Should Read This Book?

This book is designed for a variety of readers. First, practicing counselors in many different work settings who do career counseling will find this book to be an excellent in-depth update of traditional and contemporary postmodern career theories, issues, and techniques. But it is more than just an update for practitioners. With its three carefully crafted and connected parts, all organized around a holistic perspective of career development and the career counseling process, this book is a source of renewal for practitioners. Second, this book is also for counselors-in-training in counseling psychology, counselor education, and other helping relationship programs because it provides them with the prerequisite knowledge and skills to do career counseling. It features the career counseling process based on a life career development perspective with particular attention to diversity, social class, disability, sexual orientation, and gender issues. The book takes counselors-in-training through the phases of the career counseling process, providing in-depth presentations of selected techniques and assessment procedures. It offers a framework for integrating postmodern qualitative and traditional quantitative assessment techniques and information into the career counseling process directly and naturally, something that many counselors-in-training have difficulty doing.

New to This Edition

Because interest in career counseling continues to increase, and because the literature on career counseling trends, issues, and practices has expanded substantially, it was clear that the second edition of Career Counseling was in need of revision. In this, the third edition, we thoroughly updated our chapters with current literature and research concerning the many contextual variables that influence our work as career counselors as well as the theory and practice of career counseling. Our goal was to enhance the theoretical foundations and contextual underpinnings of our field while maintaining our emphasis on the practical. Some of the most significant revisions and additions include the following:

- The expansion of the chapter on ways to understand career behavior to provide a brief overview of the evolution of career theory building as well as coverage of postmodern approaches to career development, including constructivism and social constructionism.
- Greater infusion of social class as an important variable in career counseling as well as a more thorough review of the literature concerning the unique career issues faced by lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals and updates of current literature concerning counseling with individuals with disabilities.
- The addition of a chapter featuring assessments focusing on individuals’ personal and work styles as well as their strengths.

References

Acknowledgments

This book was written with the support, encouragement, and tangible contributions of many colleagues. We particularly acknowledge the contributions of Lisa Flores, Patrick Handley, Puncky Heppner, and John Kosciulek: Lisa for her substantial contributions to Chapter 3, “Empowering Life Choices: Career Counseling in the Contexts of Race and Class”; Patrick for his contribution to Chapter 14 concerning the INSIGHT Inventory; Puncky for his substantial contributions to Chapter 5, “Empowering Men’s Life Choices: An Examination of Gender and Sexual Orientation”; and John for writing Chapter 6, “Empowering Individuals With Disabilities Through Career Counseling.” We also thank Kathleen Kerr for her help in researching portions of the book. Thank you, Lisa, Patrick, Puncky, John, and Kathleen.

Finally, this book could not have been completed without the very effective and efficient work of our administrative associate, Linda Coats, who has now helped us through two editions of this book. Thank you, Linda.
Norman C. Gysbers, PhD, is a Curators’ Professor in the Department of Educational, School, and Counseling Psychology at the University of Missouri. He received his bachelor’s degree from Hope College in Holland, Michigan, in 1954. He was a teacher in the Muskegon Heights Michigan School District (1954–1956) and served in the U.S. Army Artillery (1956–1958). He received his master’s (1959) and doctorate (1963) from the University of Michigan. He joined the faculty of the College of Education at the University of Missouri in 1963 as an assistant professor. In addition to his duties as an assistant professor, he also served as the licensed school counselor at the University Laboratory School until 1970.

He was awarded a Franqui Professorship from the Universite Libre de Bruxelles, Belgium, and lectured there in February 1984. He was a visiting scholar at the University of Hong Kong in May 2000, 2002, and 2004; a visiting scholar at the Chinese University of Hong Kong in January 2001; and a scholar in residence at the University of British Columbia in July/August 2000.

His research and teaching interests are in career development, career counseling, and school guidance; and counseling program development, management, and evaluation. He is the author of 87 articles, 33 chapters in published books, 15 monographs, and 17 books, one of which has been translated into Italian, Korean, Japanese, and Chinese.

He has received many awards, most notably the National Career Development Association’s Eminent Career Award in 1989; the American School Counselor Association’s Mary Gehrke Lifetime Achievement Award in 2004; the William T. Kemper Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2002; the Governor’s Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2004; the Faculty/Alumni Award from the University of Missouri–Columbia in 1997; and the Distinguished Faculty Award from the Mizzou Alumni Association, University of Missouri, in 2008.

Mary J. Heppner, PhD, is a full professor of counseling psychology at the University of Missouri–Columbia. She is also an associate director of the Career Center on campus. Dr. Heppner graduated from the University of Minnesota–Morris with her bachelor’s, the University of Nebraska Lincoln with her master’s, and the University of Missouri–Columbia with her doctorate. She has written in the areas of women’s career development and adult career transitions. She is coauthor of the texts Career Counseling: Process, Issues, and Techniques (1998, 2003), Career Planning for the Twenty-First Century (2000), and A Guide to Successful Theses, Dissertations, and Publishing Research (2004); and is coeditor of and contributor to Handbook of Career Counseling for Women (2006). She is author of the Career Transitions Inventory and coauthor of the Career Counseling Self-Efficacy Scale. Her most recent research has been in the area of examining which aspects of the process of career counseling lead to effective outcomes. In addition, she has a programmatic line of research on the prevention of sexual assault in middle school, high school, and college populations.

She has been a Fulbright scholar in Taiwan. She is a Fellow in the Society of Counseling Psychology of the American Psychological Association. She has won the John Holland Award for Research in Career Development and the Early Scientist Practitioner Award, both from the Society of Counseling Psychology. She was also awarded the National Career Development Association Merit Award. On the University of Missouri campus she has won the William T. Kemper Award for Outstanding Teaching, the Robert S. Daniel Junior Faculty Teaching Award, the College of Education Outstanding Graduate Mentor Award, and the Graduate Schools Outstanding Mentor Award. She was also awarded the Provost’s Committee on the Status of Women’s First Annual Tribute to Mizzou Women Award for contributions and commitment to the University and to the women who work and study at the University of Missouri.

Joseph A. Johnston, PhD, is a professor in the Department of Educational, School, and Counseling Psychology at the University of Missouri, where he is also director of the University’s Career Center. His bachelor’s, master’s, and doctoral degrees are all from the University of Michigan. He regularly teaches courses in career development and is codirector of the Center for Research in Career Psychology. He is a founder of the Wakonse Foundation, an organization helping to elevate and improve college teaching. His memberships include the American Association for Counseling and Development, American Association for Higher Education, American College Personnel Association, Midwest College Placement Association, and National Career Development Association.

He initiated the A Way With Words literacy program, the A Way With Numbers tutoring program, and the Jumpstart program at the University of Missouri in response to the America Reads Challenge. He has published in numerous professional journals, organized workshops, presented at professional meetings nationally and internationally, and is on the Editorial Board of the Journal of Career Development. He has a strong commitment to career theory and practice, leadership, self-directed learning, faculty development, entrepreneurship, and positive psychology.

His awards and achievements include the following: Research Award in Career Development Scholarship named in his honor, February 2000; Excellence in Education Award, May 1996, Division of Student Affairs, University of Missouri; Certificate of Recognition of Service, April 2002, Kiwanis Club of Columbia, Missouri; Distinguished Membership, National Society of Collegiate Scholars, September 2002; Sam M. Walton Free Enterprise Fellow, 2005; Honorary Member of the National Residence Hall Honorary, 2005; Member, Board of Directors, Funding African Children’s Education, Inc. (FACE); Member, Planning Committee for MU Colleague Circles, 2000–2007; Faculty Advisors, MU Student Entrepreneurs, 2005–2006.
Lisa Y. Flores, PhD, is an associate professor in the Department of Educational, School, and Counseling Psychology at the University of Missouri–Columbia.

P. Paul Heppner, PhD, is a professor at the University of Missouri–Columbia as well as the cofounder and codirector of the Center for Multicultural Research, Training and Consultation.

John F. Kosciulek, PhD, CRC, is a professor in the Department of Counseling, Educational Psychology, and Special Education at Michigan State University in East Lansing.