If A Tree Falls in the Forest, Does a Member of Congress Hear It?: What Research Shows Works, and Doesn’t, in Contacting Your Federal Legislators
30-Minute Poster Session
Scott Barstow, Art Terrazas, Jessica Eagle
Despite what you may think, members of Congress do listen…at least sometimes. The problem they have is that there’s so much to listen to! Find out what researchers have learned—and what Capitol Hill staff have said—about what congressional offices do and don’t respond to when it comes to constituent contacts. Whether you want to advocate on behalf of the counseling profession (and we hope you do!) or be more effective when you speak up on other issues, following a few simple tips can dramatically increase your chances of being heard.
