United States citizens of various races, religions, and ethnic backgrounds, representing a multiplicity of labor and civil rights organizations, marched on Washington on August 28, 1963. They marched to remind the Nation's leaders that this country must become responsive to the needs and aspirations of its people. At issue was whether the United States would reaffirm its own creed, "All Men Are Created Equal", and extend life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness to its oppressed, disinherited, and disenfranchised men and women. Would the ideals of American democracy become operative for all of her people? The March on Washington helped to hasten our Nation's commitment to civil rights, voting rights, and due process of the laws of our citizens.

This year indicates the Twentieth Anniversary of the Historic 1963 March on Washington. The American Association for Counseling and Development, which is dedicated to enhancing human growth and development by serving the needs of the total person, supports the March on Washington's Twenty-Fifth Year Mobilization and its emphasis on peace, freedom, and jobs.
