- Approval of Gun Violence Statement
It was moved by the Human Rights Committee that the Governing Council adopt the following statement:

The American Counseling Association (ACA) does not condone acts of gun violence and advocates for prevention of gun violence and early intervention in the treatment of the psychological harm that it causes individuals, communities, and society. ACA acknowledges that gun violence is a major threat to the physical, emotional, and mental health of individuals and that it is a human right to be safe and free from fear.

Therefore, it is moved that the ACA Executive Committee examine the following action strategies designed to promote gun violence advocacy, raise awareness to the detrimental effects of gun violence in society at-large and determine which ones are feasible to do within the next two years.

1. Advocate for a national call for increased availability of and access to professional counselors and other support services in urban and rural settings to assess the environment and make recommendations in terms of mental health needs and gun violence prevention.
2. Support the use of increased professional counseling services for individuals who present with mental health needs, with a particular emphasis on adequate staffing in mental health settings.
3. Promote research efforts focused on understanding and identifying factors related to perpetrating acts of gun violence, intervention and prevention strategies aimed at decreasing the frequency of these acts.
4. Endorse research efforts toward understanding the immediate and long-term consequences of acts of gun violence and determining evidence-based treatment interventions for individuals suffering from negative consequence related to gun violence.
5. Provide training to educate counselors and the public regarding risk and protective factors associated with gun violence, as well as evidence based interventions that address subsequent mental health symptoms.
6. Initiate prevention and early intervention efforts focused on mental health resources and raising awareness in the community related to gun violence. Support a preventative stance toward gun violence rather than a reactive one.
7. Develop advocacy efforts including marches, talks, speeches, conferences, and media and promotional campaigns with counselors, community leaders, social service providers, and other service leaders to promote increased the public's awareness of the mental health consequences and prevalence of gun violence.
8. Encourage research focused on the mental health consequences of gun violence, promoting resilience and wellness, reducing negative outcomes.

These action strategies can be supported through the development of taskforces and volunteer leadership initiatives, position statements, articles in Counseling Today, advocating for and supporting legislation and other strategies as appropriate.

- Approval of Climate Change Statement

It was moved by the Human Rights Committee that the Governing Council adopt the following statement:

The American Counseling Association (ACA) acknowledges that climate change and its consequences impact mental health and wellness for individuals, families, communities, and can disrupt social support systems and cultural traditions. Furthermore, the ACA affirms the UN Human Rights Commission and the International Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) recognition that the impact of climate change poses a clear threat to the full and effective enjoyment of human rights, including the right to mental health and wellness. Moreover, the ACA stands in alliance with all individuals who have been and will be impacted by climate change and supports counselors who work to address the needs of those most vulnerable to the consequences of climate change.

Therefore, it is hereby resolved that the ACA affirms and recognizes the important role that counselors play in understanding the psychological impact of climate change and its effect on clients, families, and the communities that they serve. This includes but is not limited to encouraging research, education, and advocacy efforts pertaining to the psychological, behavioral, cultural and ethical implications of climate change and its subsequent impact on human behavior and global relations.

MOTION CARRIED

The Endorsement and Development of a Professional Occupational Interstate Compact for Professional Counselors

It was moved by M. Kerulis and seconded by E. Forsyth that:

Whereas licensure portability—the ability to transfer a professional counseling license when a practitioner moves to a different state—is one of the foremost concerns of professional counselors; and

Whereas even the most experienced of counselors can be required to obtain additional supervision hours or meet other requirements before they can secure a new license after a move across state lines; and

Whereas, in some cases, counselors with decades of experience are told that they cannot transfer their license to their new home state under any condition; and

Whereas advocating for licensure portability that allows professional counselors licensed at the independent practice level in one state to have the mobility to use their education and training and to serve the public by becoming licensed at the independent practice level in another state, which supports the mission of the American Counseling Association; and

Whereas licensure portability for professional counselors can help the public by:

- Encouraging counselors to consider relocating to areas where more than 100 million Americans live with an officially recognized shortage of mental health care professionals. Rural areas, in particular, face a documented and dire shortage of counselors;
- Recognizing that there are approximately 7.6 million people who move to a different state each year and that this number includes professional counselors who are spouses of military personnel and other families of federal government employees;
- Helping licensing boards to better meet the needs of underserved populations such as older adults, people of color, and individuals living in poverty; and

Whereas the development of a professional occupational interstate compact for professional counselors would enhance and advance the ACA portability model that calls for professional counselors to be able to seamlessly transfer their license when they move to another state or jurisdiction; and

Whereas the development of a professional occupational interstate compact for professional counselors would address two critical aspects of licensure portability in addition to physical mobility:

- The ability to practice tele-counseling;
- The ability to practice in border states and;

Whereas the National Center for Interstate Compacts, an arm of the Council of State Governments, has submitted a proposal to the American Counseling Association for the development of a professional occupational interstate compact for professional counselors; and

Whereas the National Center for Interstate Compacts has an established track record in assisting occupations with developing and implementing professional occupational interstate compacts;

Therefore, the American Counseling Association Governing Council:

1. Endorses the development of a professional occupational interstate compact for professional counselors;
2. Empowers the ACA President and the ACA CEO to negotiate and sign a contract with the National Center for Interstate Compacts to include three phases:
 - a. Project research, the development and convening of the advisory group, and the drafting of compact language;
 - b. The development and implementation of legislative strategy;
 - c. The development of the commission bylaws, structure, membership, budget and promotion strategies.
3. Allocates up to $600,000 for the contract with the National Center for Interstate Compacts. These funds will be drawn from the long-term operating fund balance rather than from the operating budget.

Financial Report

D. Jackson provided a review of the proposed changes to the FY2019 budget, noting that the rationale for presenting a proposed revised budget came from suggestions made at the Financial Affairs Committee meeting in March 2018 and Governing Council Meeting in April 2018, that staff go back and reconsider the previously approved FY2019 Budget to see if the actual FY2018 results would lead us to recommend changes. With the closure of FY2018 financials, we factored in recommended changes to the budget based on FY2018 performance, with the result being a revised budget that lowers revenue and expenses both by approximately $128,000, but has a net-neutral impact.

It was moved by L. Meadows Morton and seconded by M. Jencius that the revised FY2019 Budget be approved as presented.

- Motion from Human Rights Committee on Women and Harassment
Resolution on Mental Healthcare and Advocacy Focused on Gender-Based Harassment among Girls and Women

The American Counseling Association (ACA) stands with girls and women who experience gender-based harassment including sexual and physical abuse, exploitation, and gender inequality. ACA recognizes that gender-based harassment is unjust and violates the human rights of girls and women. ACA supports the use of culturally-responsive mental health support and advocacy for girls and women who are survivors of gender-based harassment. Further, ACA stands in solidarity with the United Nations and its work to promote gender equality and globally prevent gender-based harassment.

Harassment involves any type of unwanted or agitating actions or behaviors of one individual or group directed toward another person or group, which may lead to fear and distress. Sexual harassment includes unwanted sexual advances, demands for sexual requests, and verbal and physical harassment framed in sexual behavior. Recently, public awareness of the influence and prevalence of sexual harassment in the lives of girls and women has increased. Specifically, one in two women experience some type of sexual harassment or unwanted sexual behavior in her lifetime. In the workplace, an estimated 25% of women experience sexual harassment. One out of six American women has been the victim of an attempted or completed rape in her lifetime. Younger girls and women (12-34 years) are at highest risk of sexual violence. Female survivors represent 82% of all juvenile rapes and 90% of adult rapes.

Though greater visibility has been given to sexual harassment among girls and women, the psychological consequences associated with this type of harassment continues to be a major mental health issue that affects many individuals, groups, and communities. Girls and women who have experienced some form of sexual harassment are at increased risk for posttraumatic stress disorder, depression and suicidality, substance use disorders, poor work and academic performance, and interpersonal relationship difficulties. As a result, preventing sexual exploitation, abuse, and harassment, and promoting gender equality have been highlighted as top priority issues by the United Nations. Moreover, the United Nations has developed a set of Millennium Development Goals, one of which is focused on achieving gender equality and empowering all girls and women. This goal underscores the discrimination and violence towards girls and women that is perpetuated throughout the world. According to the United Nations, "Gender equality is not only a fundamental human right, but a necessary foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and sustainable world."

The eviscerating impact of sexual harassment, if left untreated, can be incapacitating. Therefore, well-trained counselors are in an excellent position to respond to the resultant deleterious mental health consequences associated with sexual harassment in the lives of girls and women. ACA is committed to promote counselor competence as it pertains to access to and delivery of culturally-responsive care for all girls and women who have been negatively affected by sexual harassment regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, culture, physical ability, age, sexual or affectional identity, and socio-economic status. The ACA and its members stand in solidarity with counselors in schools, agencies, and other work settings who counsel and advocate on behalf of all people who have been directly or indirectly affected by sexual harassment, exploitation, abuse, and gender-based inequality. The ACA and its members are dedicated to creating safe spaces for those impacted by adverse treatment and establish opportunities for ongoing culturally-responsive counselor training and effective counseling services that directly address these issues. The ACA and its members pledge to advocate on behalf of and with girls and women who experience these issues by working to remove barriers, promoting equality, and increase access to mental health care.

Based on the aforementioned, be it resolved that ACA staff and leadership team in conjunction with the Executive Committee will assess which of the following specific actions will be feasible for the organization to do over the next 18-24 months:

- That the ACA charge a specific group/taskforce of volunteer leaders to develop culturally-responsive competencies for counseling girls and women who are survivors of gender-based harassment;
 - That the ACA promote the use of school and clinical mental health counselors, college counselors, and other professional counselors working with girls and women as primary stakeholders in gender-based harassment prevention, treatment, and advocacy;
 - That the ACA supports and initiates short- and long-term actions that promote awareness of gender-based harassment including, but not limited to, articles in Counseling Today, podcasts, webinars, and continuing education opportunities.
- Motion from Human Rights Committee on Trauma

The Human Rights Committee moved that Governing Council adopt the following resolution:

Resolution on Trauma-focused Mental Health Care and Advocacy The American Counseling Association (ACA) stands in alliance with individuals who have experienced some form of trauma and recognizes that feeling safe from trauma is a basic human right. Further, ACA supports the use of trauma-focused mental health support and advocacy for individuals, groups, and communities negatively influenced by trauma.

Trauma is any event or experience that leads to extreme emotional distress or psychological impairment. Trauma can be the result of discrimination and prejudice, bullying, oppression, physical, sexual, and emotional abuse, natural disasters, institutional policies that disenfranchise, vicarious and historical trauma, violence, and war. Public awareness of the impact of trauma has increased in recent years; however the psychological ramifications of trauma continues to be a major mental health issue that affects many individuals, groups, and communities. Moreover, trauma has been underscored as a top-priority public health threat by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The debilitating impact of trauma, if left untreated, is even more devastating. Counselors are increasingly being called upon to deal with individuals, groups, and communities who have experienced various forms of trauma. Well-trained counselors are in an excellent position to respond to the causes of trauma and the resultant deleterious mental health consequences associated with traumatic events.

Albeit anyone can experience trauma, women, children, and adolescents are particularly vulnerable to traumatic events, which can have lasting and lifelong consequences if it is not addressed or is treated ineffectively.

Therefore, ACA is committed to promote counselor competence as it pertains to access to and delivery of trauma-focused care for all individuals, groups, and communities who have been negatively affected by trauma regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, culture, physical ability, age, sexual or affectional identity, and socio economic status.

The ACA and its members stand in solidarity with counselors in schools, agencies, and other work settings who counsel and advocate on behalf of all people who have been directly or indirectly affected by trauma. The ACA and its members are dedicated to creating safe spaces for those impacted by trauma and for establishing opportunities for ongoing culturally-responsive trauma-focused counselor training. The ACA and its members pledge to advocate on behalf of and with those individuals.

The American Counseling Association offers trauma and disaster mental health training (<https://www.counseling.org/knowledge-center/trauma-disaster>).

Competencies for Counselors and Related Helping Professionals:

The American Psychological Association developed Trauma Competencies for helping professionals. Acquisition of these core competencies is necessary for all trauma-related clinical work. Five broad competencies were delineated within this model including:

- Scientific knowledge about trauma
- Psycho-social trauma-focused assessment
- Trauma-informed professionalism

The ACA Code of Ethics is the ethics code for the counseling profession. In cases where any entity chartered by ACA chooses to develop a code of ethics specific to their function, that code must be aligned with, and not in conflict with, all statements within the ACA Code of Ethics.

When an entity revises a code of ethics, the revised document shall be submitted to the ACA Ethics Committee for review to determine alignment with the ACA Code of Ethics.

The ACA Ethics Committee shall forward their review to the ACA Governing Council. Any such revision cannot take effect until approved by the American Counseling Association Governing Council.

In order to promote the alignment of the entity codes of ethics with the ACA Code of Ethics, the ACA Ethics Committee will review 1/3 of all existing entity codes each year until all entity codes have been reviewed. With the release of a new version of the ACA Code of Ethics, the review process will begin again as described above. Having respect for the individual's values and integrity in no way restricts us as individuals from finding legitimate avenues to express and support our views to others, who decide and make policy around these issues. To this end, it will be ACA Governing Council policy to encourage its members to find and use every legitimate means to examine, discuss, and share their views on such matters within the Association. We also endorse the member's right to support social, political, religious, and professional action groups whose values and positions on such issues are congruent with their own.

Through such affiliations, every member has an opportunity to participate in the shaping of government policies which guide public action.

To truly celebrate our diversity, we must be united in our respect for the differences in our membership. To this end, the role of the Association in such matters is to support the rights of members to hold contrary points of views, to provide forums for developing understanding and consensus building, and to maintain equal status and respect for all members and groups within the organization.

The American Counseling Association engages in advocacy efforts that are congruent with our ethical guidelines, core values, mission, vision, and strategic plan, which includes advocating for professional counselors, the counseling profession, human rights, and social justice issues. In doing so, the American Counseling Association advocates for the promotion of mental health and wellness among clients and communities. The Governing Council selects advocacy issues to educate ACA members and the public on related evidence-based and practical strategies.

Given that the American Counseling Association (ACA) has signed on in support of the Call for Action to Prevent Gun Violence in the United States of America by the Interdisciplinary Group on Preventing School and Community Violence (February 28, 2018) (statement located at <https://curry.virginia.edu/prevent-gun-violence>), it is moved that the ACA staff in conjunction with the Executive Committee, examine five of the eight strategies (listed below) that relate to counseling and propose how ACA can actively respond to and support these action strategies. Some examples of how this can be accomplished are to develop taskforces and/or volunteer leadership initiatives, articles in the CT, position papers, supporting legislation, and any other strategies that are appropriate and feasible.

1. A national requirement for all schools to assess school climate and maintain physically and emotionally safe conditions and positive school environments that protect all students and adults from bullying, discrimination, harassment, and assault;
2. (Not counseling related)
3. Adequate staffing (such as counselors, psychiatrists, psychologists, and social workers) of coordinated school- and community-based mental health services for individuals with risk factors for violence, recognizing that violence is not intrinsically a product of mental illness;
4. Reform of school discipline to reduce exclusionary practices and foster positive social, behavioral, emotional, and academic success for students;
5. (Not counseling related)

6. A national program to train and maintain school- and community-based threat assessment teams that include mental health and law enforcement partners. Threat assessment programs should include practical channels of communication for persons to report potential threats as well as interventions to resolve conflicts and assist troubled individuals;

7. Removal of legal barriers to sharing safety-related information among educational, mental health, and law enforcement agencies in cases where a person has threatened violence;

8. (Not counseling related)

Gender Inclusive/Gender Non-Conforming Restroom Facilities at ACA Annual Conference & Expo

It was moved by M. Kocet and seconded by C. Roland that ACA publicly affirms the dignity and worth of transgender, gender non-conforming and LGBTQ+ individuals.

ACA and its members recognize that requiring people to use a public restroom that does not match their gender identity is a form of discrimination, harassment, and marginalization that can affect a person's developmental processes, self-esteem, and self-concept.

ACA is committed to creating a conference environment where members and guests can engage in professional development sessions, attend leadership meetings, and network with colleagues in an affirming and welcome environment. ACA affirms the basic human right to access public restrooms and changing facilities that match their gender identity and that conference facilities uphold this right. The ACA is committed to nondiscrimination and providing comfortable and unrestricted access to restrooms and changing facilities that are safe and affirming for transgender and gender expansive youth and adults, particularly during the annual ACA Conference.

When feasible, ACA commits to working with convention site staff in providing Gender Inclusive restroom facilities in prominent, public spaces each year during the ACA Conference that are safe and affirming for gender non-conforming youth and adults. ACA will clearly identify such restroom facilities and provide visible signage to identify such facilities and provide educational materials explaining ACA's commitment to inclusive and gender inclusive restroom facilities, including a statement in the ACA convention booklet. And that

2. ACA supports member's right to support social, political, religious, and professional action groups whose values and positions on such issues are congruent with their own. Through such affiliations, every member has an opportunity to participate in the shaping of government policies which guide public action.

It is therefore it is moved by J. Daniels and seconded by M. Kocet that ACA articulates their position on human rights, social justice, and advocacy issues while recognizing that members also have their own personal views on issues. While doing so, it is recognized that ACA must be true to its core values as outlined in our ethics stating the importance of “honoring diversity and embracing a multicultural approach in support of the worth, dignity, potential, and uniqueness of people within their social and cultural contexts”; and the importance of “promoting social justice.” And as stated in A.7a and A.7b.

In recognition of this, the Governing Council considers it appropriate for this body to officially take positions on social justice and human rights issues, be involved in advocacy efforts and articulate advocacy statements related to these issues.

Therefore, ACA stands in solidarity with immigrants, refugees, and communities of different religious faiths that have been directly or indirectly affected by this mandate. Graduates from programs accredited by CACREP or an approved affiliate of CACREP (e.g. CORE) in Clinical Mental Health Counseling, Clinical Rehabilitation Counseling, Marriage Couple and Family Counseling, or Addictions Counseling are assumed to have met these clinical preparation requirements. Graduates of other CACREP or CORE tracks will need to demonstrate that they have met the clinical coursework requirements.

ACA will support and advocate for a liberal grandparenting period of seven (7) years after the adoption of this language in state regulations, whereby individuals who graduated from regionally accredited programs can still achieve licensure and regionally accredited programs have sufficient time to pursue accreditation from CACREP or an approved affiliate of CACREP (e.g. CORE).

This advocacy will be included in the ACA Governmental Affairs Agenda as soon as is practicable.

Professional Identity and Membership Employment Task Force

The Professional Identity and Membership Employment (PIME) Task Force has worked to address our charge of informing the decision making process of the Governing Council on issues related to educational "standards, accreditation, portability, licensure, credits to degree, certification, national examinations, and pathways to educate the public and our membership on these issues". Our members have built on the issues around which there was consensus in previous discussions, and we have strived to continue working within a consensus-building framework.

We see the issues outlined in our charge as interwoven, and needing to be addressed in the broad strokes and in specific ideas. Portability (and we would add parity) will be aided by ACA taking a clear and unambiguous position on issues relating to the education and preparation of professional counselors, which in turn relates to accreditation. We have felt a greater urgency to address the issues relating specifically to counselor licensure for independent practice, as those standards are being affected by external stakeholders in individual states and at the federal level. Ultimately, we believe that a similar conversation would be useful for counselors who are not necessarily seeking licensure for independent practice.

In our work on this initiative, we are concerned with clinical work that is being conducted by counselors licensed for independent practice. For our purposes, preparation for clinical work includes coursework and supervised experience in the assessment, diagnosis, conceptualization, treatment planning (including goals, strategies, objectives, and measureable outcomes), treatment, crisis intervention and management, referral, and prevention of serious mental, emotional, and substance-related and addictive disorders. Treatment interventions should reflect both evidenced based practice, and practice based evidence, for clinical populations and presentations. Counselors should be prepared to understand the etiology and nomenclature of those disorders, and treatment approaches used by allied professions (e.g. medications used in the management of such disorders) in order to participate as part of a collaborative treatment team. Clinical counselors also bring a wellness orientation to their work, to aid individuals in maximizing their potential across domains.

Our position is presented in three parts. First, we restate our commitment to currently practicing counselors who historically may have come from diverse educational backgrounds. Next we present our recommendation for establishing educational standards for counselor licensure, which addresses current needs and position the counseling profession for increased recognition and parity in the future. Finally, we present some aspirational positions, which may help to guide the continued advocacy efforts.

The American Counseling Association reaffirms its commitment to supporting all counselors and advancing the counseling profession. We recognize that the richness of diversity in training and practice settings has enhanced the profession. Moreover, professional counselors from a wide variety of specialty areas have historically represented the counseling profession admirably.

We also recognize that if the counseling profession is to continue to grow, achieve parity with other helping professions, and enjoy wide recognition for the high quality services that counselors can provide, we must acknowledge and respond to the internal and external calls for greater accountability and consistency in the training and preparation of Licensed Professional Counselors¹. While we move toward a unified standard for Licensed Professional Counselors, we will also work to ensure that counselors who are currently in practice are not disadvantaged.

¹ We use the term “Licensed Professional Counselor” or “LPC” throughout this document to refer to counselors licensed for independent practice by a state licensing authority. We recognize that individual states may use different language (e.g. Licensed Mental Health

To that end the American Counseling Association adopts the following position of support for ongoing practice and access for current professional counselors, and with regard to the preparation and training of future licensure for professional counselors.

Current Counselors and Counselor Educators

ACA Members who identify and practice as professional counselors and/or counselor educators deserve the ongoing recognition and support of the American Counseling Association. The changes proposed below represent significant growth for the profession. Often growth is accompanied by growing pains, and we are sensitive to the fact that some counselors may perceive that they are being left out. To the extent possible, counselors who are already licensed or practicing should be assured that changes in legislation, or practice policies will not exclude currently qualified counselors from future practice. ACA will continue to advocate for professional counselors and counselor educators who are currently practicing to encourage the same levels of access, recognition, and opportunities for practice and employment that they currently enjoy.

Preparation and Training of Future Licensed Professional Counselors

ACA recognizes that internal and external stakeholders have called for greater clarity and consistency with regard to the licensure of professional counselors. The Department of Defense noted, "States have a wide range of standards, licensure and certification requirements for LPCs...The absence of a national homogeneous standard curriculum to guide the training of LPCs fails to meet beneficiaries' expectations for the national, uniform quality of care" (2006, p. 8). This presents a barrier for all counselors to achieving recognition from federal programs. Advocating for higher standards and greater accountability for future licensed professional counselors will help address the concerns of external (and internal stakeholders) and will allow the counseling profession to assert what we believe are best practices, rather than allowing third parties to establish those standards for us. As such, we propose the following position, which we believe is in the best interests of the individuals whom counselors serve, and the counselor profession.

ACA endorses the following advocacy strategies and updates to the regulatory or legislative requirements for Licensed Professional Counselors. These changes are intended to allow ACA to engage with external stakeholders in an effort to speak clearly and concisely regarding Counselor, Licensed Clinical Professional Counselor). LPC is the term endorsed by ACA following the 20/20 Initiative on the Future of the Counseling Profession, and our position would be applicable to all counselors licensed for independent practice, regardless of title.

educational standards, accreditation, and counselor identity. Furthermore, ACA will work to ensure that all proposed changes to practice related policies, state licensure laws or regulations, as well as other advocacy efforts, include enactment language and advocacy strategies that allows for at least a seven-year grandparenting period. This will allow students and professionals currently pursuing education and licensure, and counseling programs, ample time to meet the requirements outlined in this document and to complete their degree program and/or residency.

The American Counseling Association endorses, supports, and advocates for standards for licensure and a unified professional identity for Licensed Professional Counselors consistent with the guidelines in this document. This advocacy will take place with external stakeholders directly and indirectly in each of the states and US territories which currently have, or which may develop, licensure standards for professional counselors. The advocacy strategies will include supporting timely change to state licensure laws and regulations, and a concerted effort to expand federal recognition of licensed counselors in all appropriate practice settings, and for reimbursement equivalent to other master's level clinicians. We recognize that there occasionally may be unique instances when, because of political or practical issues, these advocacy efforts within specific contexts would be contraindicated (e.g. opening a state counseling law may result in restricted practice). In those instances, advocacy efforts will be delayed until such time when it is in the best interest of the counseling profession and the clients counselors serve to pursue these changes.

Specifically, ACA will support advocacy efforts to update and amend applicable sections of the relevant state statues and/or regulations for Licensed Professional Counselors to read:

Licensure Title

Licensed Professional Counselor

Definition of Counseling

Counseling is a professional relationship that empowers diverse individuals, families, and groups to accomplish mental health, wellness, education, and career goals.

Counseling Scope of Practice

Practice of Professional Counseling shall mean the application of mental health, psychological, and human development principles in order to: (a) facilitate human development and adjustment throughout the life span; (b) prevent, diagnose, and treat mental, emotional, or behavioral disorders and associated distresses which interfere with mental health; (c) conduct assessments and diagnoses for the purpose of establishing treatment goals and objectives; and (d) plan, implement, and evaluate treatment plans using counseling treatment interventions. Counseling treatment interventions shall mean the application of cognitive, affective, behavioral, and systemic counseling strategies, which include principles of development, wellness, and pathology that reflect a pluralistic society. Such interventions are specifically implemented in the context of a professional counseling relationship.

(a) The independent practice of counseling encompasses the provision of professional counseling services to individuals, groups, families, couples and organizations through the application of accepted and established mental health counseling principles, methods, procedures and ethics.

Counseling promotes mental health wellness, which includes the achievement of social, career, and emotional development across the lifespan, as well as preventing and treating mental disorders and providing crisis intervention.

Counseling includes, but is not limited to, psychotherapy, diagnosis, evaluation; administration of assessments, tests and appraisals; referral; and the establishment of counseling plans for the treatment of individuals, couples, groups and families with emotional, mental, addiction and physical disorders.

Counseling encompasses consultation and program evaluation, program administration within and to schools and organizations, and training and supervision of interns, trainees, and pre-licensed professional counselors through accepted and established principles, methods, procedures and ethics of counselor supervision.

The practice of counseling does not include functions or practices that are not within the professional's training or education.

(b) The use of specific methods, techniques, or modalities within the practice of professional counseling is restricted to professional counselors appropriately trained in the use of such methods, techniques, or modalities.

Educational Requirements for Licensure

The educational requirements for an individual seeking licensure as a professional counselor will include a:

Graduate degree (masters level or higher) consisting of a minimum of 60 semester hours or 90 quarter hours of graduate study in a clinically-focused counseling program accredited by a counseling accreditation body, which is recognized by the Council for Higher Education

Accreditation (CHEA). The 60 graduate semester hours must include study in each of the areas listed below², and supervised practicum/internship experiences in a clinical setting.

- a. The helping relationship, including counseling theory and practice;
- b. Human growth and development;
- c. Lifestyle and career development;
- d. Group dynamics, processes, counseling, and consulting;
- e., Assessment, appraisal, testing of individuals;
- f. Social and cultural foundation, including multicultural issues
- g. Principles of etiology, diagnosis, treatment planning, and prevention of mental and emotional disorders and dysfunctional behavior;
- h. Couples, family, and/or systems counseling;
- i. Research and evaluation; and
- j. Counseling professional orientation and counseling ethics.
- k. Principles of etiology, diagnosis, treatment planning, and prevention of addictive disorders and behaviors.
- l. Crisis prevention, preparedness, response and management.

Preparation for clinical work includes coursework and supervised experience in the assessment, diagnosis, conceptualization, treatment planning (including goals, strategies, objectives, and measureable outcomes), treatment, crisis intervention and management, referral, and prevention of serious mental, emotional, and substance-related and addictive disorders. Treatment interventions should reflect both evidenced based practice, and practice based evidence, for clinical populations and presentations. Counselors should be prepared to understand the etiology and nomenclature of those disorders, and treatment approaches used by allied professions (e.g. medications used in the management of such disorders) in order to participate as part of a collaborative treatment team. Clinical counselors also bring a wellness orientation to their work, to aid individuals in maximizing their potential across domains.

We support the inclusion of an alternate path to licensure, for individuals who possess a graduate degree (masters level or higher) consisting of a minimum of 60 semester hours or 90 quarter hours of graduate study in a counseling program accredited by a counseling accreditation body, which is recognized by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA), but which is not clinically focused (e.g. school counseling, career counseling, etc.). In order to be considered eligible for licensure for independent practice, these graduates must demonstrate preparation to work with clinical populations and presentations, which may require additional coursework and/or supervised practice experiences in the assessment, diagnosis, conceptualization, treatment planning (including goals, strategies, objectives, and measureable outcomes), treatment, crisis intervention and management, referral, and prevention of serious mental, emotional, and substance-related and addictive disorders. Treatment interventions should reflect both evidenced based practice, and practice based evidence, for clinical populations and presentations. Counselors should be prepared to understand the etiology and nomenclature of those disorders, and treatment approaches used by allied professions (e.g. medications used in the management of such disorders) in order to participate as part of a collaborative treatment team.

Aspirational advocacy

1) Programs that do not include 60 credit hours within their degree program must make clear to students the pathways for students to obtain 60 credit hours (either within the program or through an agreement with a program that can offer the required credits).

2) Accrediting bodies must ensure that programs which they accredit promote counselor identity with the following criteria:

a. Train counselors in ACA's definition of counseling and scope of practice

b. Ensure that programs teach ACA Code of Ethics and competencies developed by ACA (e.g. the multicultural competencies, and advocacy competencies).

c. Ensure that programs teach the history of counseling profession, counselor identity, and counselor professional orientation.

d. Ensures that faculty members are actively involved in the counseling profession. Examples of this are: participating in ACA National, State Branch, and Division conferences, conducting research and writing in ACA and counseling journals, maintaining counseling licensure and certification, involvement in ACA or ACA affiliated organizations (branches and divisions), counseling leadership positions, and participating in counseling advocacy.

It was moved by G. Lawson and seconded by R. Kristianson to: Approve the Consent Agenda as amended.

Motion passed.

The Consent Agenda Items:

- Minutes of the March 2014 Governing Council meeting
- Minutes of the June 2014 Executive Committee meeting
- Government Affairs agenda.

It was moved by G. Lawson and seconded by C. Roseman to: Remove the Nominations and Election Review Task Force from consideration, and move forward approving the remaining committees and task forces.

Motion passed.

It was moved by R. Kristianson and seconded by A. Locke to: Table the discussion regarding the Nominations and Election Review Task Force.

Motion passed.

It was requested that the following statement be reflected in the Minutes:

The Task force For Professional Identity and Membership Employment uses the common ground that came out of the work group and the subsequent Governing Council discussion, to collect data, look at models, gather information, and establish recommendations and a rationale for those recommendations. In order to inform our decision making on issues related to standards, accreditation, portability, licensure, credits to degree, certification, national examinations, and pathways to educate the public and our membership on these issues, this Task Force will bring recommendations and provide data and information to the Governing Council. These recommendations will be made and the information and data be brought no later than the next Governing Council meeting in Orlando.

It was moved by G. Lawson and seconded by R. Kristianson to: Charge the ACA Election Review Task Force, with Thelma Duffey, Don, W. Locke, and Cirecie West-Olatunji as members to serve in an advisory capacity to the Nominations and Election Committee. The Nominations and Election Committee may consult with current ACA Nominees and general membership with regards to appropriate and effective campaign policies.

Motion passed

It was moved by A. Locke and seconded by C. Roseman that: The approval of the March 2014 Meeting Minutes be revisited given that a moratorium on Organizational Affiliates application was verbally stated at the Governing Council meeting and this was omitted from the minutes. Motion passed. Point of clarification: Verbal statements that are part of a discussion are not included in the Minutes. Verbal statements, without a motion, second, and vote are not enforceable.

It was moved by G. Lawson and seconded by C. Roseman that: Consistent with our existing Governmental Affairs Agenda, the American Counseling Association endorse, support, and advocate for a path to licensure and a unifying professional identity for licensed professional counselors. Specifically we endorse and will advocate for:

- The consensus title adopted by the 20/20 initiative of Licensed Professional Counselor.
- The consensus scope of practice adopted by the 20/20 initiative.
- Standards that require graduation from a clinically-focused counselor preparation program accredited by a counseling accreditation body, which is in turn accredited by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation. Programs must include a minimum of 60 semester credits (or 90 quarter hour credits) of curricular experiences. Within those 60 semester credits (or 90 quarter hour credits), students must complete a practicum of at least 100 hours and an internship of at least 600 hours.
- A clinical mental health exam should be required for licensure as a professional counselor.

We will support a liberal grandparenting period of seven (7) years after the adoption of this language in state regulations, whereby individuals who graduated from non-accredited programs can still achieve licensure.

While we recognize that individuals who are already licensed are not affected by this change in any way, we will continue to advocate for opportunities for those who are currently licensed, but who do not meet specific practice requirements established by external organizations (e.g. TRICARE).

This advocacy will be included in the ACA Governmental Affairs Agenda as soon as is practicable.

It was moved by A. Locke to: Table the Motion.
Motion passed.

It was moved by C. Wilde and seconded by B. Flamez: The American Counseling Association (ACA) recognizes and supports the two counseling accrediting bodies currently recognized by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (CHEA) (a process of external review of the accrediting organization that is used to review quality and effectiveness) that accredit professional counseling programs: the Commission on the Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP) and the Council on Rehabilitation Education (CORE). Further, we recognize that both CACREP and CORE establish standards that are outcome-based and designed to educate practitioners to meet the counseling needs of the individuals with whom their graduates work.

Further, the American Counseling Association (ACA) recognizes and supports the two counseling certifying bodies currently accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA) (a peer review process used to establish accreditation standards and to recognize programs which demonstrated compliance): the National Board for Certified Counselors (NBCC) and the Commission on Rehabilitation Counselor Certification (CRCC).

The American Counseling Association (ACA) has worked to advance the counseling profession and enhance the quality of life of society by setting professional and ethical standards for the counseling profession. Consistent with its mission, the ACA has made significant strides in accreditation, licensure, and national certification for counselors. The ACA Governing Council, therefore, has the right and the responsibility to advocate to state licensing boards for the inclusion of all qualified counselors who are graduates of accredited programs recognized by CHEA in state counselor licensure laws.

An ethnoracial minority member shall be elected to serve on the ACA Governing Council. Such a member shall be elected through the recommendations of an ACA-wide nomination process for Divisions, Regions and Committees, and a final selection by the Governing Council. In order to have equity in the selection process, ACA Divisions, Regions and Committees are invited to nominate individuals for the seat designated for an ethnoracial minority representative on the Governing Council. Nominations will be accompanied by supporting documents attesting to the individual's qualifications. Specifically, nominees must provide a vita and three references. The nominations submitted by Divisions, Regions and Committees will be done so in a time frame as designated by Governing Council in order to ensure clarity about the dates for nomination, review of nominees, and final selection of the candidate. This process will happen in conjunction with the annual nomination and election process of the American Counseling Association. The ethnoracial minority member representative shall serve a term of three years in concurrence with the standard terms served on Governing Council.

Individuals are eligible for nomination and consideration if they fulfill the following requirements: (1) the nominee self-identifies as an ethnoracial minority member; (2) the nominee has demonstrated a commitment to advocating for issues focused on diversity and multiculturalism as evidenced by national conference presentations, scholarly publications, and service for certain groups; and (3) the nominee is an ACA member in good standing.
