Hello!

At the American Counseling Association (ACA), we are dedicated to advancing the counseling profession and promoting the professional development of counselors across all settings. With over 70 years of leadership in the mental health field, ACA stands as a trusted resource for counselors, educators, and students worldwide.

Our publishing program reflects this commitment by offering a wide range of books that combine cutting-edge research, evidence-based practices, and practical tools to empower counseling professionals. From essential texts on foundational skills to resources addressing emerging topics in mental health, we aim to meet the diverse needs of counselors at every stage of their careers.

Our mission is clear: to produce high-quality, impactful publications that inform and inspire counselors, fostering a deeper understanding of human development, relationships, and resilience. We are proud to partner with leading experts in the field to bring innovative ideas and meaningful insights to our readers.

Behind our catalog is a passionate team of publishing and marketing professionals with years of experience developing and promoting counseling-focused publications. Our editors, designers, and marketing specialists are here to guide and support authors every step of the way—from manuscript development to publication and beyond. We are committed to ensuring your work reaches its full potential and finds the audience it deserves.

Whether you are a reader seeking professional growth or an author with an important contribution to make, we invite you to explore our catalog and connect with us. Together, we can continue to shape the future of counseling.

Reconceptualizing the Counseling Profession: A Decoloniality Journey

EDITED BY EDIL TORRES RIVERA AND IVELISSE TORRES FERNANDEZ

Featuring insights from 20 members of historically colonized nations, this bold new textbook reclaims the work that's been both foundational to and obfuscated in the field of counseling by giving voice to neglected populations. This book goes beyond social justice and advocacy, providing practical applications and interventions for anti-oppressive counseling practices. It invites counselors to the work of decolonial liberation and decoloniality so that their practice and care can deeply and richly meet the needs of post-colonized populations.

Multicultural Issues in Counseling: Racial & Ethnic Dimensions of Helping, 6th Edition

EDITED BY COURTLAND C. LEE AND MARJA HUMPHREY

The sixth edition of this essential resource offers counselors concrete pathways to create spaces that honor diversity, foster healing, and strengthen resilience across racial and ethnic identities. Edited by Courtland C. Lee and Marja Humphrey, this edition focuses on the cultural experiences of racially and ethnically diverse clients, centering antiracism and social justice as essential principles of culturally responsive counseling. Understanding that race and ethnicity are critical – though not sole – factors that shape well-being, this book examines the counseling and development needs of people of color and provides guiding frameworks to help practitioners address systemic inequities and promote equitable access to mental health services.

The Counselor and the Law: A Guide to Legal and Ethical Practice, 9th Edition

ANN M. ORDWAY

The ninth edition of this essential resource provides timely and needed coverage of new legislation impacting the counseling field. Written by attorney and counselor educator Ann M. Ordway, this new edition features not only a sneak peek at the long-awaited revisions to the American Counseling Association Code of Ethics, but also a focus on preparing counselors for intentional and unintentional court-involved roles, ethical considerations, and guidelines for maintaining appropriate records and responding to subpoenas. A vital tool for students, counselors, educators, and supervisors, The Counselor and the Law equips readers to navigate the intersection of ethics and law across jurisdictions, recognize and avoid common ethical pitfalls, and understand the scope and limits of counselor advocacy in legal settings.

Counseling through Community Conditions: Integrating the Social Determinants of Mental Health Across Practice Settings

A. STEPHEN LENZ AND KAPREA JOHNSON

Understanding that clients exist within a web of community conditions — schools, neighborhoods, policies, and social norms — this deeply relevant book equips counselors to recognize, assess, and respond to the mental health challenges shaped by social determinants of health. This resource moves beyond symptom-focused care to address “the causes of the causes” behind mental health outcomes.

Using vivid case examples, practitioner insights, and reflective questions that are relevant across diverse practice settings, counselors are empowered to act on what truly drives well-being and to champion a more equitable, compassionate approach to mental health.

The Space Between Us: Contemplative Counseling and the Art of Encounter

EDITED BY DANIEL GUTIERREZ AND STEPHANIE DORAIS

In a time of growing psychological and spiritual need, this book is both a clinician’s guide and an invitation for counselors, counselors-in-training, and integrative practitioners to practice greater depth, discernment, and humanity. Bridging the long-standing divide between empirical science and lived spiritual wisdom, this book offers a grounded alternative to both overly technical manuals and uncritical self-help texts. Drawing on more than 15 years of clinical experience and a robust body of empirical research, the authors blend evidence-based insights with vivid case narratives to illuminate how contemplative practices can support treatment of anxiety, depression, trauma, addiction, and existential distress. Chapters feature real-world clinical stories with concrete, usable practices, while addressing cultural humility, trauma-informed care, and ethical boundaries.

Brief Counseling: Principles and Practice

EDITED BY DERRICK A. PALADINO AND CAITLYN MCKINZIE BENNETT

In response to the realities of managed care, short-term therapy settings, and the urgent demand for accessible mental health services, this book showcases that, with brief counseling, less isn’t a limitation; it’s a strength. More than a collection of techniques, this book is a call to action that invites readers to champion equitable, client-centered, and time-sensitive care that meets clients where they are and responds to the demands of today’s counseling landscape. Organized into two dynamic sections, the book first lays the foundation for effective brief work, addressing ethics, creativity, neuro-informed practice, and practical strategies that help clinicians work with clarity, intention, and efficiency. The second section brings theory to life, offering approaches thoughtfully adapted for short-term application, including dynamic and Adlerian models and contemporary modalities such as acceptance and commitment therapy, dialectical behavior therapy, and internal family systems.

Critical Theories in Counselor Education

EMILY C. GOODMAN-SCOTT, AHMAD WASHINGTON, AND RAWN BOULDEN

This volume draws on critical race theory, Black critical theory, Black feminist theory, feminist theory, queer theory, critical disability theory, and critical Indigenous theory to respond to the growing call within the counseling profession for culturally responsive, socially just, and equity-driven practice. Although many counselor education texts include chapters on diversity or social justice, few offer a sustained, integrated application of critical theories across the field. This book directly addresses that gap by embedding critical theories throughout CACREP’s five doctoral domains: counseling, supervision, teaching, research and scholarship, and leadership and advocacy. Rather than treating critical perspectives as supplemental, Drs. Emily Goodman-Scott, Ahmad Washington, and Rawn Boulden position them as essential to counselor education, informing the work of doctoral students, faculty, graduate programs, institutional and professional leaders committed to justice-oriented transformation.

Modern Masculinities: A Holistic and Intersectional Approach to Men’s Mental Health

EDITED BY TYCE NADRICH

While acknowledging the historical and ongoing privileges associated with male identity, this book foregrounds the distinct needs, challenges, and vulnerabilities that males and men face today. Using an intersectional framework, it explores evolving constructions of masculinity alongside racial, ethnic, cultural, generational, and spiritual influences. Informed by the authors’ clinical and academic experiences, it examines men’s mental health across key domains, including human growth and development, psychopathology and diagnosis, disability, career and work, and relationships and connection. This book equips counselors-in-training, practicing counseling professionals, and others invested in men’s mental health to recognize diverse expressions of masculinity, understand the sociocultural and generational factors shaping men’s mental health, and conceptualize responsive, culturally attuned approaches to supporting males and men.

Crisis Intervention Ethics Casebook

RICK A. MYER, JULIA L. WHISENHUNT, AND RICHARD K. JAMES

The fast-paced, unpredictable, and high-risk nature of crisis intervention creates critical ethical dilemmas that can result in personal harm and professional liability if not handled appropriately. Applying a traditional model of ethical decision-making is often impractical when time is limited and decisions must be made quickly. This counseling tool kit offers a new operational approach for integrating ethical decision-making in crisis intervention. Following detailed discussions of crisis intervention within the framework of relational-cultural theory, a triage assessment system, and an original ethical decision-making protocol, nine diverse case studies in hospital, telebehavioral health, school, clinical, and public settings are presented.

Stepping In, Stepping Out: Creating Stepfamily Rhythm

JOSHUA M. GOLD

This much-needed resource offers insight into building and maintaining satisfying and successful stepfamily relationships. As the number of stepfamilies continues to increase, counselors and other mental health professionals are likely to encounter clients seeking help in navigating these often complicated relationships.

In this book, Dr. Gold emphasizes the principles and practices of narrative therapy as a means to address key concerns within the family system, reauthor dominant social myths surrounding stepfamily life, and create realistic treatment plans that are inclusive of all members of the family.

Surviving and Thriving in Your Counseling Program

JULIUS A. AUSTIN AND JUDE T. AUSTIN II

Written for graduate students who want to get the most out of their experience, this book presents down-to-earth discussions and suggestions on counselor training and life after graduation. The authors, both millennials and recent doctoral program graduates, draw upon their own personal and professional training and career experiences, as well as shared insight from a diverse group of current graduate students, recent graduates, and new professionals. The realistic, personal, and often humorous narratives throughout the book give an insider's perspective on graduate school and illuminate the emotional journey of students and new professionals.
