WHEREAS, Article 7 of the UDHR states: All are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to equal protection of the law; and
WHEREAS, The United Nations Realizes the importance and extent of the migration phenomenon, which involves millions of people and affects a large number of States [countries] in the international community and has authored and adopted the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families (CPRMW); and
WHEREAS, Considering the situation of vulnerability in which migrant workers and members of their families frequently find themselves owing, among other things, to their absence from their State [country] of origin and to the difficulties they may encounter arising from their presence in the State [country] of employment; and
WHEREAS, Taking into account the fact that migration is often the cause of serious problems for the members of the families of migrant workers as well as for the workers themselves, in particular because of the scattering of the family; and
WHEREAS, Considering also that recourse to the employment of migrant workers who are in an irregular situation will be discouraged if the fundamental human rights of all migrant workers are more widely recognized and, moreover, that granting certain additional rights to migrant workers and members of their families in a regular situation will encourage all migrants and employers to respect and comply with the laws and procedures established by the States concerned; and
WHEREAS, The CPRMW recognizes the need to bring about the international protection of the rights of all migrant workers and members of their families, reaffirming and establishing basic norms in a comprehensive convention which could be applied universally;
